

Roo and Piglet

Opposites attract with this pair of Pugs by Web Walker

Brooklyn-born Piglet and Roo are Pugs with distinctively different personalities who share a deep love of each other and their family.

Piglet is the jock of the Bradley family and is always on the go. He loves to run and will play fetch as long as he has a willing person to keep throwing a ball for him.

Roo, on the other hand, is quite the couch potato and is always on the lookout for a snuggling partner.

Owners Elizabeth and Paul first got Piglet and Roo through Delaware Valley Pug Rescue to be a foster home for them. They quickly were smitten with these diverse dogs and decided they would keep them for good.

The pair of Pugs were a little overweight when the Bradleys first received them. But after a healthy raw diet and snacks only for training purposes, the corpulent canines were soon back into healthy shape.

Roo can be a bit of an introvert at times and definitely prefers humans to dogs, except for her true love Piglet. Piglet, in an effort to reciprocate his love for Roo, pulled off a superdoggy effort that to this day is still a tale of great merriment in the Bradley household. He, despite his diminutive size (he is a Pug after all!), managed to open the refrigerator door all by himself. Next he wrestled open the deli drawer and pulled out a bunch of meat. Then he ran to get Roo to share his hard-won bounty.

Nowadays Piglet is much more behaved, and the Bradleys cherish the day these two wonderful dogs entered their lives.
